The discussion will be on recent developments in property law pertaining to adverse possession:

- Principles of Adverse Possession
- Understanding various terms and how they might apply to Adverse Possession
- What are the requirements necessary to support a claim of Adverse Possession
- Adverse Possession in respect to property rights
- Acquiescence
- Estoppel
- Parole Evidence
- And time for Questions & Answers segment

Round Table Discussion—South Central Chapter Members

This will be a discussion with preset topics on subjects that Surveyors face everyday.

FRIDAY CLASSES

Highways, Byways, and Private Roads (Friday Morning) With Wendy Lathrop

Location or relocation, free or restricted access, centerline or sideline: all of these aspects of roads affect the work of both boundary and construction surveyors. After a brief history of roads and road building in the US, we will investigate the creation of public and private terrestrial passage, the entities that control them, the rights of abutting owners, and the extinguishing of those same corridors for transportation.

- A brief history of road development in the US
- Definitions of terms related to roads: highway, public road, private road, abandonment, vacation, reservation, exception, necessity, convenience
- 5th and 14th Amendment rights, state constitutional rights for "just compensation"
- Federal and state statutory definitions and agency regulations affecting roads and highways
- Common law and statutory law applications in court cases
- Agency contact list

This half-day course is meant for either intermediate or advanced audiences. The objective of the program is to include participants in debate about practical application of the legal aspects of land acquisition, road location and width, and use of roads, whether those roads are public or private.

Tracking the Railroads (Friday Afternoon) With Wendy Lathrop

Railroads have played a major part in the settlement and development of the United States. The importance of these bands of steel uniting the country was underscored by the powers granted to railroad companies to acquire land rights in whatever way necessary, whether by grant, in fee, or as easements. Surveyors involved with the original location and layout of the rails had a much easier time of it than we do today, as we try to recreate not only original configuration of rails and parcels, but also what kinds of rights the railroad companies may have had in the land beneath their tracks. We will discuss historical, legal, and practical aspects of the problems we face today as we unravel the railroad puzzle.

Participants will:

- Become aware of different legal definitions of railroads and how these affect railroad rights and regulation
- Identify the variety of real property interests that railroads may hold through examination of document language and laws
- Recognize the evolution in railroad and private landowner rights

Topics covered:

- What is a "railroad" by law
- Brief history of railroad development in the US and impact on American life
- Finding railroad records
- Federal and state constitutions, statutes, regulations, and case law regarding railroad land rights and operation
- Extent, type, location, and time/duration of railroad rights
- Abandonment of railroad rights
- Rails to Trails conversions

SATURDAY CLASSES

Deeds and Descriptions - Wendy Lathrop

The real property description is a legal document meant to preserve information about every aspect of real property – its location, its character, its physical dimensions – and the full or limited rights of those acquiring interests in it. The deed in which the description appears contains additional important information about who, what, why, when, and any conditions related to the real property transaction.

Whether addressing full ownership or some lesser interest in land, the hierarchy of evidence guides us in the process of "construing" descriptions that are ambiguous in some form. Specific words and phrases have legal meanings not necessarily recognized by readers and writers of descriptions, and this can add to the confusion.

This course deconstructs deeds and real property descriptions to examine and better understand them and their role in creating and protecting real property interests. Our objective is to better understand the variety of deeds and descriptions we encounter.

Participants will:

- Understand the variety of possible interests held in real property
- Identify the reasons that contents of deeds and descriptions are important
- Learn about the kinds of evidence found in deeds and descriptions
- Distinguish the parts of deeds and descriptions and comprehend their significance to the entire document
- Recognize the significance of language and punctuation in descriptions

Kansas Minimum Standard—Paul Maurin

This course will discuss the creation of the Minimum Standards, including a brief history and keys to interpreting their meaning. This class will meet your 2 hour requirement for Kansas Minimum Standards for the Kansas Board of Technical Professions.

Floodplain Management-Elevation Certificate—Steve Samuelson

The two hour and a half hour class will go over completion of the elevation certificate form. Flood insurance laws that relate to elevation certificates have changed a lot in just the last year. Those changes will be discussed at beginning of class. This class will go through elevation certificate forms line by line to discuss accurate completion of the forms. Special attention will be placed on building diagrams and base flood elevations. We will also go over expected changes coming up for next revision to the elevation certificate forms. There will be discussion of Letters Of Map Change if time allows.

Young Surveyors Meeting

At this meeting of we will have an open panel discussion. There will be a couple of "Seasoned" Surveyors to answers any of your questions. This group is for non-licensed and newly licensed (under 5 years) surveyors. This YS Panel will be free of charge if you are not attending the conference and only want to attend this meeting. YOU WILL NEED TO RSVP BY CONTACTING VALERI AT EXEC@KSLS.COM or CALL 316-680-5159.
